The entrepreneur's checklist: where you lose time, and where to start

The 5 areas where an entrepreneur loses the most time, and what a tool can take over.

When you work alone or in a small team, there is no admin department and no assistant: everything rests on you. Score from 1 to 5 how heavy each area is right now, then start with the heaviest.

The 5 areas

Area	What takes your time	Weight (1 to 5)	Can it be automated?
Inbox	Sorting emails, answering the same questions		Yes: sorting, template replies, drafts
Finding clients	Looking for prospects, following up, tracking who replied		Yes: tracking and follow-ups. Research is prepared
Content	Finding ideas, writing, scheduling, publishing		Partly: ideas, drafts, scheduling
Admin	Invoices, payment reminders, scheduling, meeting notes		Yes: almost all of it
Branding	Thinking about your positioning, your identity, your message		No: clarify it first, with a human

To find your first time saver

- [ ] Which task did I put off several times this week?
- [ ] What do I redo identically every week?
- [ ] Where do I forget to follow up?
- [ ] What could an assistant do without asking me?

Your plan in 3 steps

1. Choose the area with the highest weight.
2. Write down what you do each time, step by step.
3. Automate one single thing, measure the time saved for 2 weeks, then move on to the next.

Branding first

A blurry message, automated, stays blurry. Before automating your content or your prospecting, take an hour to write in 3 sentences: who you talk to, what you do for them, what sets you apart.
